

www.world-results.net Ltd Launches WR Client Service

Groningen, Netherlands – 25 January 2010

www.world-results.net Ltd, a company specializing in collecting international football match data, has today launched the WR Client service, allowing private individuals access to its vast archive of over 35000 international football results/fixtures and over 10000 players from past and present. The private individual is able to access the service via a subscription through client software that they can download and install on their own computer. The software allows querying in many ways, such as query by: date range, country, tournament, venue, player, goal, substitution, zone/phase/group, etc. Data is downloaded from the www.world-results.net Ltd servers each time a query is created by the user. As such, data is guaranteed to always be completely up-to-date with the data on the server. Queries are also easily saved and can then be loaded later on. As such the software allows a lot of flexibility for the private individual to access the data in an efficient manner.

Raoul da Silva Curiel, CEO of www.world-results.net Ltd, said that “this offering positions it to not only provide its current business customers with data, but also the private individual. This is a huge step for www.world-results.net Ltd and its future, allowing it to further expand its archive of matches and players in the near future. This is something that we have worked towards for many months and is something we can be very proud of.”

The launch of the service in no way signals the end of the development of the software. The software will continue to evolve with new features being added over time. Indeed at present only “basic” and “medium” feature sets are available but the company will shortly release “advanced” features that will, for example, give functionality to aid betting on matches. Another much-awaited feature is a tournament view that will allow users an overview of any of the roughly 1300 tournaments stored in its archive. At present work is being undertaken to add a charting view and a match "timeline" feature has already been designed.

About www.world-results.net Ltd's Football Archive

www.world-results.net Ltd's archive contains over 35000 match records and comprises international football results and fixtures from every past and present footballing country in the world from Afghanistan to Zimbabwe, some 245 countries in all. As well as the new 'player' and 'goal' data, the archive contains the following data:

- date – the day the match was played,
- score – half-time, full-time, extra-time, penalty and awarded,
- tournament information – the name of the tournament and stage/group/zone,
- venue – the country/city/stadium where the match was played,
- status – whether the match is considered to be a full FIFA international match or not,
- comment – any extra information about the match, for instance, whether the match was played using only players from the local league, or whether a club team represented the national team,
- players - details of players that played in a match including their full names, date of birth and field position, and when they were substituted in or out,
- goals - details about the goals that were scored in a match, and whether the goal was a penalty, an own goal or a normal goal.

The archive also contains tournament structure information for each tournament from the World Cup to the smallest of 'friendly' tournaments such that it is easy to determine where a match fits into a tournament.

The archive is updated 365 days a year and typically several times per day. As such the archive can be sourced for historical data as well as 'live' up-to-date data.
